The Red Poll cattle recently purchased by the Commercial bank, consisting of one registered bull and 12 heifers, will arrive in Newberry today (Tuesday). The bull weighs over 2,000 pounds and we are informed by Clemson college authorities that he is one of the handsomest animals in South Carolina. He will be used primarily for the benefit of the customers of the bank free of charge. The heifers will be sold to their customers absolutely at cost. "On next Saturday the 25th of March we will display said cattle on the public square and have their pictures taken," said an official of the bank. Then the bank will be glad to have every farmer in Newberry county who is interested in stock raising to inspect their herd. Don't miss this sight that will ultimately mean so much for the progress and prosperity of Newberry county. The eleven registered Duroc sows which the bank has purchased for one boy, being a member of the boys corn club for each of the 11 townships of the county, will arrive before long. The president of the Commercial bank has adopted a plan to be worked through the boys' corn club that will enable this county within the short time of four or five years to grow every pound of meat that we consume and have a goodly supply of hogs to sell to consumers who are less fortunate than they will be. Come to town on Saturday, the 25th of March and thereby lend your encouragement and cooperation to this forward movement.

INTERESTING MISSIONARY SERVICE AT LITTLE MOUNTAIN

Last Sunday evening the reporter had the pleasure of a trip by auto to Little Mountain with the editor and the editor and enjoyed an able missionary address by Prof. S. J. Derrick who came back to Newberry with the newspaper bunch.

Prof. Derrick is a forceful and convincing speaker and his address to the congregation of Holy Trinity Lutheran church at Little Mountain Sunday night was in keeping with his reputation as a speaker and devoted churchman.

The occasion was the close of the week of prayer by the women's home and foreign missionary society of Holy Trinity church.

After a scripture lesson by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Long, and a song service, Prof. Derrick was introduced in a few highly complimentary remarks by the pastor.

Prof. Derrick expressed gratitude at the privilege of speaking to this congregation as it was at this altar he took the vows of the church and commenced with God. The speaker defined the meaning of the word missionary as applied to religion and said that it was a mistaken idea that the religion of Jesus Christ was one which produced a long face and a whining, complaining disposition. On the contrary, it was a religion of joy and optimism which teaches how to live here and hereafter. After comparing conditions in Christian America with those in Pagan India, he urged the spreading of the gospel and insisted that if we believed the gospel we would spread it. He discussed the question as to whether the heathen would be saved if they failed to hear the gospel and asserted that so far as our knowledge goes they could not be saved.

He refuted the idea that the great European struggle was evidence of the failure of Christianity and attributed this great world war to the influence of the devil. He was insistent in his praise for the unselfish and devoted work of the women in the foreign mission field but he declared with great emphasis that this is a man's job.

The speaker closed with an appeal to his old church to take on renewed interest in the subject of foreign missions.

At the close of Prof. Derrick's address Miss Gentry sang a solo while the ladies of the society took up a collection.

The collection was a very liberal one and was evidence of the interest of the congregation in the mission cause.
